

Keep your new service on track.

Verizon Edge Solutions Site preparation services.

Your network powers your business and we're pleased that you've selected Verizon, one of the world's largest network providers, to help you deploy new network services or equipment. To help you avoid last-minute delays and smooth your installation path, consider Verizon Site Preparation Services to make sure your facility is ready for business.

Whether you're a large enterprise or small business, your revenue can be impacted each day you're waiting for an installation. With Verizon Site Preparation Services*, we will assess your facility and help make sure it's fully ready for your new systems. With services designed to support your unique needs, we also offer simple pricing, straightforward contracts, and licensed technicians so you can be confident that the work will be done right.

To take advantage of our Site Preparation Services, you can choose from any of the following service offerings:

- Site survey
- Wiring services

Site survey

Engineers will perform a survey of your facilities to determine how well they can support your planned installation. We will examine your location's suitability for the new service with respect to appropriate power sources, temperature and humidity, availability of equipment (i.e. cabinets, racks and closets), and the need for any additional inside wiring.

Wiring services

We can horizontally extend standard wiring and jacks inside your facilities for connections to your on premises equipment. We can also perform demarcation extensions of wiring from your local exchange carrier (LEC) demarcation line to the installation point of the Verizon equipment and your associated equipment. The length of both the standard and demarcation extension wiring is typically less than 150 feet.

Stay focused on your business

Don't waste time trying to find reputable contractors, evaluating multiple bids and coordinating the division of work among different subcontractors to get your site in shape. With the experience that comes from managing more than 4,000 customer networks around the world, you can rely on Verizon to help smooth the path for an on-time installation of your network services. We'll identify what needs to get done and keep you informed of the progress along the way.
